

Description

RCM annual conference 2017

So, its been an exciting time and we were proud to announce the launch of the all new, fresh look journal ‘The Practising Midwife’ and our new online dedicated solution for all involved in the midwifery world – www.all4maternity.com

The RCM annual conference was held on the 31st October – 1st November 2017 at Manchester Central and was attended by over 3000 midwifery professionals. The response to all4maternity has been phenomenal, welcoming over 300 new subscribers over the two days with continued, ongoing interest and support.

www.all4maternity.com is a brand new online platform that incorporates The Practising Midwife with the aims of helping midwives in learning, sharing and caring. The new site offers subscribers evidence-based multimedia modules, webinars and workshops as well as blogs, articles and a growing online community such as peer mentoring network, podcasts and forums.

Editor Anna Byrom said

‘It was an exciting opportunity to celebrate midwifery and to connect with midwives and students from all over the country; welcoming them to our online community. We felt really supported by Pinter and Martin http://www.pinterandmartin.com and it was great to be able to share their books with subscribers. It was wonderful to be able to promote ‘Mum and you’ https://mumandyou.com and also the new Mayes midwifery textbook alongside the book launch with Elsevier. I would like to say a big thank you to the brilliant Gail Johnson and Sue McDonald!

We’re looking forward to launching all4maternity at the Scottish maternity and midwifery conference on the 28th November 2017. We look forward to seeing you there!!’

Category

1. All4Maternity Blog
2. News & Views

Tags

1. news

Date Created
23rd November 2017